ENCOURAGE SPORTS

The season is now approaching for the commencement of all kinds of summer sports and already Redcliff has organized a baseball club.

In all smaller towns the question of financing sports is one of the serious handicaps under which different sporting organizations labor, and, as we all know, few of them can be successfully run without the support of the people.

It is the opinion of the Review that good, wholesome, legitimate sports are as essential to the welfare of a town socially, morally and even from a business standpoint as almost anything else.

Some may wonder what sport has to do with the business of a town but this is especially true of a manufacturing town like ours, where a large percentage of the employees are young men who are strangers with no home ties to take up their leisure hours. They require recreation of some kind and if they cannot get it in the town in which they are working they will have to go elsewhere for it. This in turn will have a double effect on their home town. It means that their money which should be spent here will go elsewhere, and it also makes it more difficult for employees of this class of labor to secure it.

This being the case it behooves every business man to get interested in some line of outdoor summer sport and to do his share in helping to make that line a success for the whole season.

TREE PLANTING

The council is setting a good example by making an early start in setting out trees. Let all owners of property get into the game and follow the lead. If they do it will only be a matter of a very few years till we will have one of the prettiest towns in the west.

In a recent conversation with a prosperous farmer who lives west of town, in which the question of tree planting was introduced, we were given some very valuable information along this line. Our informant has one of the best treed farms in this part of the country and he told us that most of his biggest and best trees grew up from slips which he secured from along the river bank in the vicinity of his farm. We have seen this farm and although the slips were only planted a few years ago, they are now developed into fine big shade trees, just the kind which are badly needed around every home in town.

When we know that there are thousands, yes millions, of these trees which can be secured by the going after them the wonder is that there is a single property in town without them.

The town council has not said Friday, May 5th, as a clean-up day for the town. In all towns and cities of any importance this movement is growing more popular from year to year and the marked improvement of the appearance in these towns is very noticeable. Such clean-up days are absolutely necessary in the spring and we trust every citizen will do his little bit next Friday to help make the day a success.

RECRUITING

There can be no doubt in the minds of any who have been reading this paper since the commencement of the war, where the Review and those responsible for its publication stand, in regard to our soldiers and our Empire in the present conflict.

While movements of a local nature which had for their object the betterment of the soldier's conditions both at home and in the trenches have emanated from this office, and while we have assisted them in every way, yet we feel it is just as much our duty as a paper to correct a fault as it is to commend a virtue.

It is for this reason that we draw attention to what we consider a very ill advised movement on the part of a few soldiers at a dance here last Monday evening.

We can quite understand any man and possibly more especially soldiers entering enthusiastically in the spirit of securing recruits but even in recruiting the same spirit which drove the British Empire into this war and the same principals for, which her subjects are now spilling their blood should be observed. To use any other means must naturally and necessarily hinder rather than help the cause.

That any such unpleasantness such as took place here last Monday should happen in Redcliff is indeed disappointing and discouraging. There is possibly not a town its size in the whole Dominion which has a better recruiting record than Redcliff. Scarcely a regiment has left this province but had its quota of Redcliff boys in it, until now there are very few British subjects of military age left. And all this was done quietly, without the sounding of horns and without even a recruiting campaign.

Of course we know that our soldiers who are out on recruiting campaigns get up against some difficult propositions which require considerable restraint in order that the dignity of the uniform be retained. In such cases they have our sympathy and our support. But, as Tennyson would say:

"Self reverence, self knowledge, self control,
These three alone lead life to sovereign power."

DAILY DISCONTINUES

The passing out of the daily field of the Medicine Hat morning Times is but another evidence of the way the war is affecting the newspaper business.

Because of the abundance of news and the interest taken in it since the war commenced there may be some who think this would mean a big harvest for the daily newspapers. This is a big mistake. The news end of a paper is all expense and is practically non-productive, as the sales and subscription barely pay for the paper the news is printed on.

To be able to give the best news a paper must make ends meet. The falling off in advertising in local papers has been very marked since the outbreak of war, hence the numerous failures of late.

The catalogue houses have not been slow to notice this and as a result they have been very active in their advertising. They know advertising pays and they know when and where to do it. Consequently much of the talk in the smaller cities and towns about hard times and poor business has been caused because local merchants have fallen asleep at the switch and allowed business which they should have side-tracked, go through on a fast freight to catalogue houses.

This was one reason the Times was forced to discontinue as a daily. And since people must have a daily paper these days the old Times readers will now be getting the larger papers from the larger cities with larger advertisements by larger firms. This can have only one effect on the business men of that city unless they waken up to the situation and patronize the other daily and the weekly which they have left.

We regret to lose the daily Times from our editorial desk but we welcome it to the weekly field and trust it will meet with great success.

CANADA'S PATRIOTIC FUND

Canada, up to date, has given generously to the Patriotic Fund which was planned at the start to provide for the dependents of her soldiers. Today some 35,000 families are receiving aid from this source. Its beneficiaries naturally increase from week to week as the number of women and children left without support grows larger with the rallying of new men to the colors. But the great Patriotic Fund is proving equal to its Herculean task. No less than $1,000,000 in donations flowed into the fund as the result of the Duke of Connaught's appeal in January. If the war lasts until next Christmas $15,000,000 will have been raised by the Canadians for this best of causes.

The executive of the Citizens' Recruiting League adopted a recommendation of the special committee that the Dominion government be asked to pass an act requesting the province to take a registration of their male population. Some members thought that the Dominion should make this registration compulsory, in order to force the hand of Quebec.

It is a popular belief that more boys than girls are born in times of war. According to a well known doctor, however, there is little ground for such an idea. He declares he worked in a district where the strain of war was felt very much because it provided a large proportion of its population to our fighting forces. He found in six months of cases attended fifty-five per cent. of the births were girls and forty-five per cent. boys.

Escalloped Chicken

Cut cold boiled chicken in small pieces. Place a layer of bread crumbs moistened in milk, seasoned with salt and pepper, on bottom of dish. Scatter a few bits of butter over. Add a layer of chicken, then of bread crumbs until the dish is filled. Put on top a layer of crumbs in which have been stirred the yolks of two eggs, well beaten, with a little salt and pepper. Over all pour chicken gravy and a cup of rich cream. Bake half-hour, or until top is brown.

Timbale of Rice

Line a buttered baking dish with rice prepared as for croquettes, but without sugar or flavoring. By pressing it over the bottom and sides of the dish, leaving it one-eighth of an inch thick, brush the inside surface with white of egg slightly beaten, and dry ten minutes in a warm oven. Then fill the dish three-quarters full of hashed chicken, turkey or veal. Bake in the oven half an hour, or until well heated through, and serve in the dish in which it is cooked.

Gelatine Dessert

If one needs a gelatine dessert in a hurry it may be hastened by using one-half the liquid needed boiling hot and then allowing it to stand for half an hour or until cool but not beginning to harden, then adding the remaining quantity of liquid cold. Stir well and set aside to cool, which will take about one-third of the time usually required.

AT THE FORGE FIRE

Why an Old Blacksmith Hooted
the Appeal of an Escaped Convict.

By H. M. EGBERT.

The hunted man who had emerged from the mangrove thicket that fringed the road stopped, straightened himself, and passed the sleeve of his ragged coat over his eyes to wipe away the sweat that blinded him. Not fifty yards ahead he saw the red blaze of a smoky fire, its bright tongues darting among the clouds of darkness. He hid the black silhouette of a huge old man bent over the anvil, the tublike arms threatening upon a red-hot shoe.

The hunted man crept forward. The white dust of the road had powdered him, come from the lagoons had plastered him, so that the pattern of his suit was indistinguishable; it would have been hard, too, to tell whether he was old or young, black or white.

Though the warm February night gave promise of a Florida spring, though he dripped sweat, the man stretched out his hand, eyes to wipe away the sweat that blinded him. He desired, however, unconsciously emboldened by the action, was rather the warmness of human intercourse than of face since had heard a human voice.

At that moment there sounded, very musical and very strong, the sound of a hound. The man's straining ears caught the sound; he hesitated no longer but, crying his knife, fled from a soft iron bar too short for any other offensive use. He turned toward the smithy and peered in at the door.

"Can you give a stranger a shake down, mister?" he called to the smith.

"Come in, friend," answered the smith, not looking up. "Sit down beside the fire and scorch the sweat from your skin. The man obeyed, taking his seat in the shadows and pulling the ragged hat well over his eyes.

"You be from Tampa, friend?" inquired the smith, pausing in his work and looking up for the first time. Something about the man's aspect struck him, the low and meanish man that he saw. The man's straining ears caught the sound; he hesitated no longer but, crying his knife, fled from a soft iron bar too short for any other offensive use. He turned toward the smithy and peered in at the door.

KEEP ANTI-PATIN'
 THINGS something about a little spring bird's song that gets right down through the winter's water-bound hide and sets the sap of happy feeling flowing like the sweet stuff from sugar-maple.
 Maybe you've noticed too how much brighter and freer from care faces look when the old matter sun looks down on the fully grown crops of grain going like their nose up out of the earth. And I reckon, it's all clear enough too when you come to consider that this old world is sort of tinged with a system of rejuvenation. Every thing is con-thatty undergoin' change. If it was'nt for dreary winter the chances are 'on and me would get mighty tired of balmy air and sunshine.

 Half of life's enjoyment lies in looking forward to the good things, anyway an while realization falls a long way short of fond anticipation. It's a mighty good idea to keep right on anticipatin'—only a shorter course concentrate of the joy-product brand and side track the petty worries that disorganize our system.

Just you keep out doors and listen for the first spring bird's song. That's all you gotter do.
 Home, Sweet Home
 The new arrival at the London Hotel owed all thanks to the Kaiser. "From Potsdam I've come," he announced. "A fine place, sir," remarked the manager, politely.
 "Dear vast a better."
 "Yes, Berlin."
 "Nels; Ohm."
 "Ohm? Is-er-Germany, of course?"
 "Don'tever, sir, in this country—in Britain."
 "Ohm," repeated the manager reflectively.
 "Ya. I've come from Potsdam, to see Ohm. I was at der concert in Potsdam, and I hear der great English soprano sing dat, 'Der is die blase like Ohm,' an all der British people in der concert cry like der little babies. Dat must be der wonderful blase Ohm to make der British cry. I tink to mine self, I will go and see dis blase Ohm rot der vor no place like Nels. Now, vich is der way to Ohm?"

THE HOME-STAYERS
 MAYBE you've noticed that a lot of home-levia' things, a tend 'beats everything' else will or trangle. Mostly everything else will or occasion wander a little way from its domicile, but a tend—not him. It's happy rather he is or not. And I reckon he is purty happy, too, 'cause he never frowns at his wife nor scolds his children as I've h-v-n-o.
 He never gets the idea that there's a better anti-ground somewhere else; so long as there's a good fire and fish-worms right on his home lot he's sure happy and contented. Without wishin' to hint that in many respects the town above that he's endowed with more genuine good sense than a human, I will say, that lots of us could have a little closer to the example he sets without in any way wargin' our marvelous judgment. Restaurant is bound to breed dissatisfaction and there's no gettin' round the fact that the home-stayer is the happy man after all.

If we want to get the receipt for all-round, genuine happiness, we should keep our optics glued to the town.
